To whom it may concern:

We would like to recommend to you the services of Earthen Concepts & Development and Dan Sunderland.

In the spring of 2006 we purchased a piece of property in California and began researching building methods. We ran across, and a short time later hired, Dan Sunderland and the services of Earthen Concepts & Development to provide us with drawings and SIPS materials. Dan drew up floor plans from our rough ideas and sketches. He made suggestions for improvements and alterations. He also secured engineering services to provide the necessary engineering for the home's design, and designed and secured a home ventilation system.

Dan proposed a building package which included more for the money than any of the other bids we had secured. He ordered a SIPS package for us and had it delivered to our lot in northern California.

Dan was a wealth of information. He was quick to respond to phone calls and inquiries, and would do any additional research necessary to resolve an issue. His knowledge and understanding of the SIPS product and its installation is vast. Dan was extremely helpful throughout the entire building process. He consistently went above and beyond the call of duty on our behalf.

Additionally, we hired Dan to travel to California and work side by side with us during the first few days of the SIPS installation. We have never seen anyone work as hard as Dan did during those few days. He literally worked sunup to sundown in order to provide as much help as possible during the time he was here.

We would definitely hire Dan again in the future should we choose to build another home. We unequivocally and without reservation recommend him and the services of his company, Earthen Concepts & Development.

Sincerely,

Steve & Michele Anderson
